1. Why do you wish to serve as a SCAG Officer? *

In my years with Southern California Association of Governments, I have learned that the communities represented by SCAG are vastly diverse and certainly unique. Nonetheless, with direct, honest, and respectful (and occasionally uncomfortable) conversation, understanding and planning, we can develop solutions to the issues with which we all grapple. I believe my willingness to tackle difficult subjects and communicate and work with others, will be an asset in this position. The opportunity to raise awareness and understanding of how we impact, complement and depend on each other, and of the very real obstacles our region faces are exciting – no matter how difficult – and something I am highly motivated to do.

2. As an Officer, what would you contribute to SCAG? *
The perspective I bring as a Southern Californian native – from Pacoima to Palm Desert, with numerous stops along the way – is valuable. Today, as a representative from Riverside County and the Coachella Valley, I am aware of the difficulties of transportation and housing in urban, suburban, rural and low-density areas. I recognize the issues presented by our agricultural communities and their importance to our economy and health. Also, I will continue to shed light on the impending health and economic concerns of the Salton Sea that will continue to impact the SCAG region. All of these issues must be part of the Southern California discussion.

Observing and learning from the Officers of SCAG has been an outstanding opportunity. The give and take, the occasional debate (both of which I enjoy), and deliberative thinking, all with the foundation constructed with the strong work of the SCAG staff has helped me grow as a public servant. I will bring a perspective that has developed through my service, experiences with my community and familiarity with the region. My creativity, tenacity and energy with hopefully lead to realistic solutions and I would like to bring those qualities to SCAG in a greater volume than I currently do.

(A) In addition to attending regular and special meetings of SCAG’s Regional Council, will you be able to attend other meetings and functions of SCAG, if requested? *

Yes

(B) What professional or personal constraints on your time or service that you anticipate? *

I represent the City of Palm Desert and am active in RCTC and occasionally there may be a scheduling conflict.

4. What are your values and skills that you could bring to SCAG as an Officer? *
I am open-minded and serve with enthusiasm and respect for the process. Bringing energy, integrity and inclusiveness are invaluable to develop solutions – and implement them. My belief that the greatest investment America has made is public school for everyone underscores my belief that the answers to our issues in our region and beyond lie in quality and relevant education. My public service has been a great teacher and I know that listening and working together brings the highest-quality solutions. The skills that I have learned, and continue to work on, to be an effective and loving parent, apply in all areas of life – patience, listening, acceptance, and so many more (ask my children).

5. What is your vision for the future of SCAG and what do you believe needs to be done to accomplish this vision?

My vision for SCAG is that the desire to "win" does not mean anyone must "lose". Our cities, counties and agencies must work together to manage our resources, promote health and lift our community members. To accomplish this we must continue to listen and learn. Then to effectuate the vision, we need to remember that our youth are our greatest asset. They always have been. Our "early adopters" will promote and implement the improvements to our physical environment, healthy lifestyles, coupled with acceptance and embracing of difference. Our job today is to include and inspire our youth in the solutions.

6. What would you consider the strengths of SCAG?

SCAG’s strengths lie in participation by representatives and staff and the willingness to tackle new or difficult issues. Also, remaining agile and responsive while addressing weaknesses is a strength. The recent development of the Emerging Technologies Committee is a perfect example. Rather than viewing technology as just something that was happening, our approach is to find ways to cause it to be an asset and a tool for the organization. It defines leadership.

7. What could SCAG improve on?

We have heard repeatedly that we must have our voices heard in Sacramento. An annual visit will not get the job done. We know the reasons that Northern California receives more attention and resources – they are constantly seen and heard. Developing a plan to be "the squeaky wheel" is critical. Part of that plan is to respond immediately with presence in Sacramento when needed. And when not in Sacramento, we must work together to send a strong and consistent message that our needs must be met fairly and with realistic approaches.

1. Why do you wish to serve as a SCAG Officer? *

I have been a member of SCAG for more than a quarter of my life and now that I am in my last term, I want to do what I can for an organization that I admire and that has done so much for our region. I learn something new everyday at SCAG and am thankful for the relationships and resources, and the good work of our employees and leadership team.

2. As an Officer, what would you contribute to SCAG? *

I would be a good team player on the Executive Committee guiding SCAG to fulfill its role and assisting our Regional Council and their communities. We are facing some unprecedented challenges in our cities and our region. I would be a voice for providing the tools for those that strive to be a model for others to exemplify, and incentivize positive action for those that are struggling.
As a manager, I want to ensure our Executive Director can take the organization to the next level, and encourage employees to strive for excellence and have high morale.

As a leader, I want to make a welcoming environment at SCAG that values our staff, our membership and our partners. I will devote my time to increasing the positive efforts and effectiveness of the organization and work with our membership and staff to achieve this. I will also encourage an atmosphere of rolling up our sleeves and engagement, with a goal of improving the livability of our region. With a Master’s in Urban Planning and work experience as a Transportation Planner, as well as having sat on all the SCAG committees, I bring a regional set of tools to assist me and SCAG. I also have an understanding of city government as a former Planning Commissioner, Councilmember and Mayor of a city of 130,000, and will contribute a knowledgeable understanding of issues with a strong background in policy and problem solving. As a County Supervisor, I bring a wider breadth of resources associated with County government to assist my leadership role at SCAG.

(A) In addition to attending regular and special meetings of SCAG’s Regional Council, will you be able to attend other meetings and functions of SCAG, if requested?

Yes, I will prioritize being there for SCAG at SCAG offices, and at functions and meetings throughout the region, state, nation, etc.

(B) What professional or personal constraints on your time or service that you anticipate?

My Board of Supervisors meetings are on most Tuesdays which is a constraint, unless there are critical issues for SCAG on a Tuesday that needs my presence.

4. What are your values and skills that you could bring to SCAG as an Officer?

Relationships: Friendships and key relationships with dozens of leaders
Experience: Understanding city and county government, Transportation Planner for public, private and non-profit agencies.

Leadership: Have served as Mayor, Councilmember and Planning Commissioner, Chaired Ventura County Transportation Commission, Ventura County Air Pollution Control District, Ventura Local Agency Formation Commission, Santa Monica Mountains Conservancy. Currently Chair of Ventura County Regional Energy Alliance, Vice Chair Clean Power Alliance, Member Ventura County Behavioral Health Board, California State University Channel Islands Site Authority.

Public Private Partnerships: Established non-profit job training program for people with mental illness (Growing Works) and provided seed money through fundraising, founded Ventura County Discovery Center for children’s science education,

Community Engagement: Created three Municipal Advisory Councils (Santa Rosa Valley, Casa Conejo, Somis), started a Waterworks District Community Advisory Committee (Lake Sherwood), convened several Senior Summits at CSUCI for hundreds of senior citizens and service providers, organized Unity in the Community (Oak Park) in response to anti-Semitism, and organized dozens of Quarterly Dinner events on topical issues, led initiatives that protect farmland, parks and open space (SOAR and Parks Initiative), established Santa Monica Mountains Bicycle Tourism Roundtable

Transportation Planning experience with public, private and non-profit agencies and Master’s in Urban Planning that has helped me to improve transportation in my district including adding miles of synchronized signals, resolving longstanding gridlock at a regional intersection, and developing a partnership between schools, cities, and the county that created a free popular bus system, and working with bicycle companies successfully championed a new bicycle lane connecting communities that will be installed this year.

Working for the Public Good: Rotary Paul Harris Fellow, Red Cross Honorary Chair – Ride for the Red, National Alliance on Mental Illness Honorary Chair – Ventura County NAMI Walk, Small Business Administration – National Phoenix Award for Public Official of the Year, Ventura County District Attorney – Justice for Victims Award, Las Virgenes Homeowners Federation – Citizen of the Year

Values: Safe streets and neighborhoods, clean air and water, healthy, inclusive, vibrant and resilient communities, and government that cares for society’s most vulnerable, encourages public participation, fiscal responsibility, honesty, and transparency.

5. What is your vision for the future of SCAG and what do you believe needs to be done to accomplish this vision? *

My vision for SCAG is to have an active and inspired membership that works together with expert and helpful staff and public/private partners to make meaningful and lasting benefits for our region by improving transportation, furthering good planning principles, and ensuring healthy, resilient communities, safe streets and neighborhoods.
To accomplish this vision requires clearly stated goals that are embraced by the Regional Council and put forward in the RTP, RHNA and SCS. Agenda items for our committees should address how the item is relevant to the goals. We should continually look at ways to improve effectiveness to achieve further success. Having a few clearly stated goals will make SCAG better understood to those who don’t currently know what SCAG does, and focus our resources to effectuate outcomes.

I also want to support our members as they work to improve their communities. SCAG has done a great job in recent years reaching out to its member communities and there is still more we can do to assist our membership. SCAG has much to offer through its experience assisting cities and counties, offering encouragement to leaders and giving them the resources and tools to get it done.

I’d also like to work for organizational efficiencies to reduce waste and duplication, that we maintain clear budgeting, and recognize staff for their good work and that there are opportunities for their growth.

I would also like to increase the positive image people have of SCAG. For example SCAG can increase its image by participating in positive events like Ciclovia and Clean Air Day, and being associated with positive projects such as clean energy vehicles, relieving congestion, innovative housing solutions, and safe bike lanes.

6. What would you consider the strengths of SCAG? *

Over the last decade SCAG has formed new partnerships with industry and agency leaders, and coupled with a savvy staff, increased SCAG’s influence in the region. Good working relationships with State agencies including Caltrans, CARB, HCD, the Governor’s Office, and legislative leaders goes a long way towards our success. Through grants for projects and planning, the region has benefited from SCAG funding for renewal projects and transportation infrastructure. Our planning processes have emphasized multi–benefits including pedestrian safety, social justice, and affordable housing. Staff has done a great job bringing pertinent presentations that educate and prepare members for understanding SCAG issues, and make us better informed when we go back to our respective communities.

7. What could SCAG improve on? *

–Work for more multi–benefits in grants and projects, for example investment in lower income and disadvantaged communities, job training, energy conservation, safety, reduced emissions, innovative housing solutions.

–Emphasize healthy cities and de–emphasize sprawl development.

–Address urgent issues that face our region, for example homelessness.

–Join with non–traditional partners for multi–benefits such as water boards, conservancies, schools.
Organizationally, enhance financial accounting practices.

Heighten regional image: become better known as a local resource (something we've already improved on significantly), have SCAG associated with positive regional projects like popular events, safe bike paths, non-polluting transit vehicles, ending gridlock, partnering with agencies on their positive initiatives.

Educate members on positive examples of regional planning.
Ventura County Second District Supervisor Linda Parks was recognized in 2019 by the SBA for her community relations work after Ventura County endured wildfires and a mass shooting.

SBA honors Supervisor Parks for role in Ventura recovery
By Chris Officer
Staff Writer

As Ventura County’s Second District Supervisor, Linda Parks didn’t need to empathize with those affected by 2018’s rash of wildfires that ravaged Southern California, because she knew firsthand what it was like to be a victim.

Between 2017 and 2018, Ventura and Santa Barbara counties were hit by three natural disasters, the Woolsey fire, Hill fire and Thomas fire.

“All three fires hit my district,” Parks said. “Unfortunately, Ventura County has become an expert on dealing with massive wildfires.”

Parks, a resident of Thousand Oaks said even she had to evacuate her home for four nights after the Woolsey and Hill fires ignited in November 2018.

However Parks said she was committed to ensuring residents of Ventura County were safe during the wildfires and helping those affected with the recovery process. During the initial blaze, she helped keep lines of communication open throughout the county by helping announce power outages and alerting evacuated residents when it was safe to return home.

Parks said there were also other situations that arise that required on-your-toes, responses, including to ensure water companies had enough supply for firefighters to try and contain the fire.

Due to the evacuations, several residents evacuated their homes, leaving their sprinkler systems on after leaving. This created a shortage to a city’s special district, so Parks took to social media to alert homes to shut and leave their water off.

Even when Parks’ district got a handle on the burning fires, she said she then quickly collaborated with Los Angeles County fire officials, pushing residents in danger zones to evacuate.

Now that the smoke has settled, Parks said the rebuilding efforts are moving along, despite still conducting debris removal and dealing with areas heavily contaminated with asbestos. But she added the county recently saw its first building permit approved, and 70 percent of permits have been cleared.

While Parks was dealing in evacuations and wildfire recovery, she was also simultaneously juggling with Thousand Oaks tragedy, the aftermath of the Borderline Bar & Grill mass shooting, which left 12 people dead. The attack took place just hours before the Hill fire was first reported.

After the shootings Parks, despite evacuating her own home, abandoned her office, too. She said when federal agencies came to Thousand Oaks, she immediately cleared everyone out of her office near The Oaks shopping mall and converted it into an outpost.

“They were working out of our office for three weeks,” Parks said.

But maybe the most difficult time was November 2018, Parks recalled, was at the unification center at 2 a.m., where potential-victims’ family members assembled to meet with loved ones.

“There was really no unification happening, just family members there.” Parks said. “I just tried to comfort them.”

For her efforts, the Small Business Administration, which Parks said was on the frontlines of disaster relief, including handing out low-interest loans, helping employees find new or temporary jobs and other business rebuilding efforts, recognized Parks with the 2019 Phoenix Award. It is awarded for outstanding contributions to disaster recovery by a public official, and Parks was honored by both the SBA’s national and Los Angeles district office.

As Thousand Oaks mourns, county supervisor wonders how city will heal.

By Soumya Karlamangla

Linda Parks navigates her car up a winding street and sighs as she points out where fire has scorched the hillsides, now bald and black.

She usually finds solace in running and cycling in these mountains—"they're kind of like my churches," she says, gazing at them. But she quickly focuses her attention back on the road; there is no time to dwell today.

Parks, a Ventura County supervisor, is meeting with residents of Bell Canyon, an affluent community north of Calabasas where 36 homes were destroyed in a recent blaze. Then, she has to attend a funeral for a 23-year-old killed in the mass shooting in Thousand Oaks. The commitments are just an hour apart, across town.

It's a Saturday, but it's hectic, like all the days since Nov. 8, when a massacre at a bar was followed by devastating fires. When Thousand Oaks, the biggest city in the district Parks has represented for more than 15 years, became a household name. When ostracism came all SEARCH and rescue teams inspect a site in Paradise. One proposal is a "strategic retreat" from communities that repeatedly burn.

REMNANTS of a home on Dume Drive in Malibu. Another proposal is a state commission to oversee development in fire zones.

Sheryl Evans, 45, continues to search for important items at the Calabasas house she's been renting for six years. She says it's part of the healing process.
County supervisor grieves with her town

[Supervisor, from B1] constituents and other officials. For the last two weeks, though, her duties have been those of crisis management — funerals and news conferences and emergency town halls.

“I know what we’re here for, we would rather not be here for,” Parks says to the crowd, sighing again.

Tables in the community room are piled with jeans and sweaters, deodorant and toothpaste, stuffed animals and other donations. People wear shirts that say “Bell Canyon Strong.”

The Woolsey fire is the first to destroy homes in Bell Canyon, where 185 homes were built in 1989, residents say.

Parks finishes speaking and rushes out of the neighborhood. On one side of the road, the wispy trees are light green. On the other, frayed and brown.

She says she wants to move power lines underground, since many fires are caused by sparking lines. She also wants to discourage candle use, perhaps even pale them, deemed a high fire risk.

But many worry that policy changes won’t be enough to stop destructive fires. Fire officials say that the effects of years-long drought and climate change have made it nearly impossible for firefighters to contain blazes.

Gov. Jerry Brown recently warned that California is in for more unstoppable mega-fires, calling it a “new abnormal.”

One day after the shooting, Parks was evacuated from her home in Thousand Oaks due to fires. She and her husband couch-surfed for four nights until they could return. After seeing how quickly the Thomas fire moved last year, she knows her home might burn down, she says.

“It used to be, it’ll hit the coast in three days,” she says. “Now, it’s, it’ll hit the coast in a matter of hours.”

WE’VE JUST been hit with so much. Ventura County Supervisor Linda Parks said of the recent mass shooting and wildfire in Thousand Oaks.

Parks, who grew up in Los Angeles, moved to Thousand Oaks in 1988 after having her first child. She came to the city, a sleepy suburb about 40 miles northwest of L.A., for the good public schools, she says.

An urban planner, she rose to political prominence as a champion of preserving open space. She was elected to the Thousand Oaks City Council in 1996 and the Board of Supervisors six years after that.

Now, the children she raised have moved and are in their late 20s and early 30s — among the same age as most of the victims of the Borderline shooting.

Early Nov. 8, a few hours after the fatal bullets were fired. Parks found herself at the reunification center because she didn’t know where else to go. She spent nine hours there, listening to parents and giving them tissue.

There wasn’t anything she had to do or could do there.

Twelve people died at Borderline in addition to the shooter, who killed himself.

Nine families waited at the reunification center, but there was no reunification, Parks says. Some were in denial. Some weren’t.

After sitting alongside the parents for the toughest moments of their lives, Parks knows them intimately. She hugs them at their heels.

She left the reunification center around 11 a.m. and later that day — she’s pretty sure it was the same day, though the frenzied timeline has begun to blur — her office was turned into a victims assistance center.

There, she watched police hand parents their dead child’s possessions — a son’s cell phone and wallet, a daughter’s necklace.

She recalls the scene as she drives to the funeral and winces. She can’t push the image from her head. She tries to further describe what she witnessed but can barely get the words out.

Many Thousand Oaks residents have expressed similar struggles in dealing with a tragedy that touched so many lives in the community.

Glenn Cohen, a doctor in Thousand Oaks, said one of his employees was at Borderline that night, but hid in the attic and survived. Ventura County Sheriff’s Sgt. Ron Helus, who died in the shooting, was one of Cohen’s patients.

Earlier this year, Cohen’s teenage daughter was at the local mall during a shooting — another incident that shocked families here.

“We live in an area like this — we all call it ‘the bubble’ because we’re all supposed to be protected and safe,” says Cohen, 52. “We can’t be as naive as we’d like to be.”

They’re all watching.

They’re all watching.

As people begin to disperse, the elected officials who attended the service chat with one another. They sat together at two funerals a day earlier, and another the day before that. They’ve never spent this much time together, they joke — they never thought they would have to.

After this is over, they must all get together, one of the officials says. Yes, they’ll do something as a group, perhaps share a meal, another says.

Local supervisor receives national honor

Parks given SBA’s Phoenix Award

Longtime Ventura County Supervisor Linda Parks was in the nation’s capital this week to accept an honor from the U.S. Small Business Administration for her work following the Woolsey fire.

The federal agency gave Parks, a Thousand Oaks resident, its 2019 National Small Business Week Phoenix Award, a title it bestows on business owners, public officials and volunteers who display “selflessness, ingenuity and tenacity in the aftermath of a disaster, while contributing to the rebuilding of their communities,” according to a news release.

On Sunday, Parks tweeted that the honor was “very humbling, and a reflection of how we as a community rise up from the ashes.”

In the release, the SBA credits the supervisor for her actions in the wake of the November fire, which burned 97,000 acres and forced 295,000 residents—including Parks—from their homes.

“Parks cleared out her office and loaned it to county officials for their use as a Victims Assistance Center,” the SBA said. “She coordinated several fire recovery town hall meetings for displaced residents. In addition to attending fire briefings with the California governor’s office, the Department of the Interior and FEMA, Parks held numerous press conferences urging residents to follow evacuation and safety orders.”

The Phoenix Awards were presented to four people in Washington, D.C., in a special ceremony held May 5 to kick off National Small Business Week.

Task force begins tackling ways to prevent mass shootings

A task force formed to prevent mass shootings in the wake of the Borderline attack last year is looking at how to bolster public safety and add treatment options, potentially with recommendations on how to keep guns out of the hands of dangerous people.

Called the Task Force on Mental Health & Safety, the panel was established by the Ventura County Board of Supervisors after the killings of 12 victims last November at the Borderline Bar and Grill in Thousand Oaks. The gunman, 28-year-old Ian David Long of Newbury Park, also died from a self-inflicted shot to the head.

Although the criminal investigations of the shootings are expected to take many more months, county officials say the panel can look for gaps in the systems in place for protecting the public and providing mental health care in the meantime.

MORE ON THE THOUSAND OAKS SHOOTING:

- Borderline victim's family still wants gun control instead of thoughts and prayers (/story/news/local/2019/01/19/borderline-shooting-victims-family-wants-gun-control-not-prayers/2539480002/)
One idea the task force is looking at to expedite the exercise comes out of the Lean Six Sigma method used in industry and government to make continuous improvements.

County Executive Officer Mike Powers said various specialists from public safety, mental health and community organizations would meet in a team event called a “kaizen” to discuss how things work now, the problems they see and strategies to improve performance.

Powers said individuals who work on the front lines would take part. They could include deputy sheriffs and members of a mental health crisis team who respond to homes where someone is at risk of harming themselves or others, he said.

Ventura County Supervisor Linda Parks said the event should provide a lot of data that will be “enormously helpful” for the task force.

Parks, who represents the Thousand Oaks area, asked the Board of Supervisors to establish the task force a month after the shooting. Parks suggested then that a panel of experts be brought together to make recommendations on how to prevent and lessen the damage from mass shootings.

She said experts could look into whether police need more body armor to protect themselves, the design of buildings could be changed to minimize harm and issues surrounding access to guns for people with mental illness.

The task force currently is composed mainly of key county officials handling public safety, administrative, policymaking and mental health responsibilities. They include Sheriff Bill Ayub, District Attorney Greg Totten, Probation Director Mark Varela, Public Defender Todd Howeth, Behavioral Health Director Sevet Johnson, other health care officials, Powers and Parks. Thousand Oaks City Manager Andrew Powers is also on the panel.

Others are being added to represent veterans, courts, state legislators who may be able to help get laws changed, schools and mental health clients plus other organizations.
The task force has met twice, is scheduled to continue to meet monthly and is just beginning its work. A proposed mission statement calls for identifying steps to enhance systems for safety and mental health care to prevent gun violence, but has not yet been adopted. Recommended actions would build on existing strengths of agencies in the county, the draft statement said.

Members of the public are invited to make comments and suggestions for the task force at www.venturacountyreovers.org/county-of-ventura-task-force-on-mental-health-and-safety (https://www.venturacountyreovers.org/county-of-ventura-task-force-on-mental-health-and-safety/).

The task force’s meetings, though, are not open to the public.

The panel’s recommendations will be made public when they are presented to the Board of Supervisors at an undetermined date, county officials said.

New Kanan bus shuttle ready to serve community

August 29, 2013

By Sylvie Belmond
belmond@theacorn.com

A new shuttle bus for residents of Agoura Hills and Oak Park is on the move.

The Kanan Shuttle, featuring two 24-passenger shuttle buses with a logo of a leaping mountain lion on the side, will loop back and forth between the 101 Freeway in Agoura and Lindero Canyon Road in Oak Park.

The buses provide a safe and comfortable transit alternative for Oak Park residents of all ages, said officials at a ribboncutting ceremony Monday at Mae Boyer Park.

Ventura County Supervisor championed the service with the help of the Ventura County Public Works Agency, the City of Agoura Hills and First Transit bus company.

All rides are free until November.

The shuttle operates Monday through Friday from 6:30 a.m. to 6:30 p.m., running every 15 minutes during school drop-off and pickup times, and every 30 minutes the rest of the day. There are 14 stops along the way.
“This is a perfect route because everything is along Kanan. You can take it to schools, the park and for shopping,” Parks said.

“It’s going to reduce traffic, and it’s going to be another opportunity to get out of your car, and it will improve the environment.”

Oak Park schools Superintendent Tony Knight said the shuttle “will help to mitigate traffic around Oak Park High and Medea Creek Middle School.”

The shuttle will benefit students, senior citizens and commuters who rely on Metro buses to travel between Los Angeles and Thousand Oaks.

David Fleisch, director of the Ventura County Transportation Department, said about 120 people have used the shuttle each day since the shuttle started running on Aug. 5.

The service will enhance transportation options provided by Dial-A-Ride, which has been operated by the City of Agoura Hills since 1985. Dial-A-Ride services will continue for elderly and disabled people.

“This will make life easier, hopefully, for all of us,” Oak Park Municipal Advisory Councilmember Mike Paule said. “This is a milestone in our community to connect to the rest of the public transit system,” he said.

“Not only are we providing congestion relief on Kanan Road, but we’re also helping that godforsaken parking lot that we know as the 101,” said Darren Kettle, executive director with the Ventura County Transportation Commission.

Fleisch said the local shuttle service could be emulated elsewhere in Ventura County.

“The next phase of this is to work with retailers at both ends of the shuttle to promote the shuttle,” he said.

Agoura Hills council members and Mayor Denis Weber thanked Parks and Ventura County representatives for their hard work. They hope the new service will encourage Oak Park students to patronize retail centers in their community.

Additional stops may be added in Agoura Hills to provide access to some neighborhoods in that city.

1. Why do you wish to serve as a SCAG Officer? *

I wish to serve as a SCAG Officer because I believe that SCAG has an important mission in connecting the lives of residents in Southern California. This includes transportation, technology, housing, and many other issues where a regional approach is valuable. SCAG's slogan of “Innovating for a Better Tomorrow” holds a key goal that I also have in ensuring that our residents are well served both now and into the future. As County Supervisor, a former legislator and mayor, I am keenly aware of the needs and challenges of our region and am up to the large task of doing what I can to lead others in finding innovative solutions. I have served at all levels of government, and I have served members of San Bernardino, Los Angeles, and Orange Counties, so I have developed a regional perspective. As an Officer, I would have the opportunity to continue to work with staff and other elected officials in moving our region forward.
2. As an Officer, what would you contribute to SCAG? *

My strengths as an officer would come from thinking out of the box. It takes a lot of hard work and dedication to bring projects to completion. In my many years of service, I have developed a reputation of someone who works well with others, thinks out of the box and gets things done. This collaborative approach to solving our region’s challenges is an asset, and one that I will continue to leverage as an Officer. My broad base of experience in the public and private sector allow me to approach challenges in a unique way, and reach innovative solutions.

(A) In addition to attending regular and special meetings of SCAG’s Regional Council, will you be able to attend other meetings and functions of SCAG, if requested? *

Being engaged is an important part of being a leader, I look forward to playing an active role in moving forward SCAG goals and initiatives.

(B) What professional or personal constraints on your time or service that you anticipate? *

I understand that this role comes with additional responsibilities and am ready and able to play an active role upon becoming an officer. The only challenges that I foresee would be possible scheduling conflicts; though, I would prioritize this role in the event of competing priorities. I presently serve as Chairman of the Board of Supervisors in San Bernardino County, and I look forward to bringing that experience to SCAG.

4. What are your values and skills that you could bring to SCAG as an Officer? *

My reputation as someone who works well with others and gets the job done will be valuable assets in supporting the President and ensuring that SCAG as an organization achieves and exceeds its goals for our region. Regarding values and skill set, I look forward to continuing to bring creative problem solving, leading by example and innovative ideas to the table.

5. What is your vision for the future of SCAG and what do you believe needs to be done to accomplish this vision? *

Nominating Committee - Aug. 22, 2019

There are a number of issues that need to be approached from a regional perspective rather than being in silos in a particular city or county because the issues cross political boundaries. Homelessness, transportation, and the use of technology are three issues that don't recognize city or county lines, and many others exist. Technology has been a personal interest area, one that I have continued to bring to the forefront of our organization's list of priorities and considerations. As a result of creating this dialogue, I asked for a subcommittee to be formed that explored some of the facets of implementing technology to meet our residents' needs. We have scratched the surface of what technology can do to help us solve problems, I believe that this needs to be an ongoing conversation, and will be actively engaged in further exploring as an Officer.

6. What would you consider the strengths of SCAG? *

SCAG is the largest MPO in our nation, with six counties, 191 cities and more than 19 million residents. We serve almost 50% of the total population of California. If our region was a state, we would be 5th largest on the list from the top with almost as many residents as the entire State of New York. The diverse size and scope of the region makes SCAG well-respected in all areas of planning in which it is engaged. SCAG does a phenomenal job of anticipating the infrastructure our region will need to keep up with the demands by residents to stay mobile.

SCAG also does a great job pursuing grant opportunities to improve the lives of residents, and works with our local partners in ensuring that we are heard.

7. What could SCAG improve on? *

Because we serve so many communities, communication with the public is not always a simple task especially when it comes to reaching all of our stakeholders. SCAG is doing well in this area, and this is an area that I think that we can continue to improve as our technological capabilities increase. We should focus on non-traditional solutions to some of our regional challenges such as looking to improve goods movement and upgrades to government technological improvements.
I acknowledge I have read the SCAG Bylaws, Article V, Section C, subsection 1-5 as described above; and meet the minimum eligibility requirements.

1. Why do you wish to serve as a SCAG Officer?
   My history with SCAG dates back almost fifteen years to when I served as Supervisor Yvonne Burke's SCAG deputy, and it has been a pleasure, since being elected to the Los Angeles City Council, to sit on the board as a Regional Council Member. The City of Los Angeles has not always consistently engaged with SCAG at a leadership level and I would like to change that as an officer on the Executive Committee. As a SCAG Officer, I will be better able to keep the City of Los Angeles engaged on critical regional policy discussions and decision-making.

2. As an Officer, what would you contribute to SCAG?
   As an experienced member of SCAG, through my time on the Regional Council and as a staffer, I believe SCAG's core mission is vital to helping craft policies at the City and County levels that will ensure the growth and vitality of the region in the years to come. I bring fifteen years of institutional knowledge to the role and as an Officer and I hope to not bring the perspective of the largest jobs and housing hub in the region to the Board, but also advocate on behalf of the organization and region at the state and federal levels.

<td>My role as an LA City Councilmember means that I represent nearly 300,000 constituents. I have an obligation to attend Los Angeles City Council and Committee meetings, as well as ensuring that I meet with and listening to constituents and community organizations. However, as stated above, I intend to make role as a SCAG officer a priority and proudly represent not only the residents of District 51 but the Southern California Region at the state and federal levels.</td>
</tr>
</tbody>

4. What are your values and skills that you could bring to SCAG as an Officer? *

My prior experience as a staff member to Los Angeles County Supervisor Yvonne Burke has shaped my views and approach to regional policy making. As an elected official, I’ve carried that experience into my day-to-day work. I enjoy getting into the weeds on large policy issues and advocating for policies that will benefit the greater community. When I first ran for office, I emphasized the need to restore trust in government and prioritized community engagement. As an Officer, I hope to preserve and promote those values and help SCAG better engage the public about crucial regional policy decisions as well as maintaining transparency in the decision making process.

5. What is your vision for the future of SCAG and what do you believe needs to be done to accomplish this vision? *

Los Angeles is currently in a transportation and housing crisis, and I believe that SCAG’s role in regional housing and transportation policies is going to increase as the State adds more teeth to the RHNA process and uses transportation as a factor for local housing strategy. This crisis opens up room for improvement and change throughout the levels of government and my vision is for SCAG to take this mantle on fully and advocate with the State and locally for a RHNA vision and process that is future-looking. Additionally, as RHNA becomes more important, I believe SCAG should look at a larger educational campaign on what SCAG is and how the RHNA numbers we approve impacts local communities so that we can get the public more engaged.
6. What would you consider the strengths of SCAG? *

SCAG is a powerhouse because it brings together all of the agencies in Southern California. This platform allows neighboring jurisdictions to easily work together to address issues felt beyond city or county borders.

7. What could SCAG improve on? *

SCAG makes big decisions that have substantial impacts as they trickle down to local jurisdictions, and yet many people are not aware of how these are made and when in an easy to digest way. Even many local elected officials struggle to always understand the intricacies of SCAG’s work. Better diluting this work into digestible policy summaries and seminars would help bring transparency and engagement to the process.
