Recently our household had our fire insurance cancelled. We were told that we in a high fire hazard area. We had to go through the state under the Fair Plan to get fire insurance. My understanding is the appeal for our area was denied because fire safety was not a reason for appeal. So my understanding is the state is forcing the majority of this housing crisis into 6 counties of 58 counties. My question is why is this not spread out to all 58 counties. Is the state not concerned about public safety? Is the state not concerned about dangerous fire zone? I would think that public safety would be the state number one concern. I guess not.
